1.0. Scope: Scope of certification shall be clearly defined as part of audit programme. Scope shall identify the technical area or IAF sector code. The risk level has been defined according to the technical areas and hence identifying clearly the scope identifies the risk factor which in turn affects the auditing time.

1.1. Scope may specify in terms of characteristics of business, the organization, its location, aspects of technology, products, number of sites, processes as well as time period for audit.

1.2. Audit scope shall be specified with audit objectives. Scope shall clearly identify boundaries of the scope. While preparing the audit plan, processes identified shall be clearly related to the scope to be audited.

1.3. Scope shall be agreed before Stage-I audit. However after State-I, scope of certification or scope of Stage-II audit maybe modified with justification. Scope shall state products and services for which license is to be granted. In addition, if any requirement of the standard not applicable, its justification of any non-applicability shall be reflected in stage-I and stage-II audit.

1.4. Non-applicability is different from exclusions. Some of the clauses may be directly not applicable to organization because the activity may be outsourced or carried out by supplier/or sub-contractor. But if the process/controls including in process product quality rests with the client, he shall demonstrate the controls exercised at the receiving section or at sub-contracted process. Such cases cannot be shown as not-applicable.

1.4.1. If the design is carried out by the organization for manufacture of product or delivery of services; design requirements will be applicable and if the organization is operating as per frozen design requirement then design and development is not applicable.

1.5. While giving scope with non-applicability, in BIS, we may limit only to main clauses (single digit clauses) in licence scope but the report may be specific about all non-applicability clauses and observation sheet shall carry justification clearly.

1.6. Licence document to indicate the previous cycle and last date of audit and present cycle.

2.0. For change of scope, the guideline MSC G6.6.-03 may be followed.
